

Risa - Sept. 13th 1848.

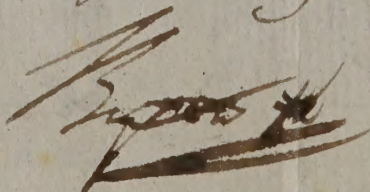

Dear Douglas

By the last two posts I sent off to you the four new portraits of Don Juan - So rogue Satherly says that he does not know what I meant by hinting that I had shown some kindness to one of his relations - I tell you what it is - In 1815 Mr Satherly wrote to me saying that Coleridge was in great distress - that the Literary Fund had granted him only £20, and wishing me to come to his assistance. I immediately sent him one hundred pounds - more than two thirds of what I could command in the world - This happened at a time when (as you know) I had dinners and excursions in my house daily -

D. W.

I have no desire to trumpet this - but thus much for rogue Sauthey's information - As for what the Purgymon says of D. J. Murray has brought it upon himself by his absurd half and half proceedings. I have to acknowledge the receipt of several books which I will announce shortly - but why do you send anything to the foreign office - that den of thieves - you constitute yourself librarians to those lazy rascals who ought to be copying dispatches instead of poking their noses into books intended for my lordship only - Shall it be another thing - as Tuledon says -

Always yours very truly

Pier - Sept. 13th 1842 -

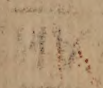

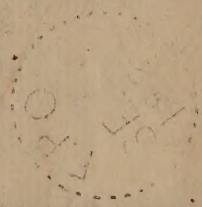

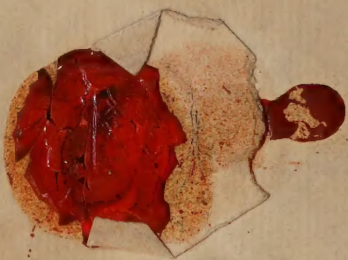

Dear Douglas

By the two last posts I sent off to you the four new fables of D. J. — So Rogers Saith says that he does not know what I meant by hinting that I had shown some kindness to one of his relations — I tell you what it is — In 1818 Mr.
Saithly wrote to me saying that Colbridge was in great distress — that the literary fund had granted him only £. 20. — and wishing me to come to his assistance. I immediately sent him one hundred pounds — more than two thirds of what I could command in the world — This happened at a time when (as you know) I had luncheon & evening in my house daily — I have no desire to trumpet this — but thus much for Rogers Saithly's information. D. J.

As for what the flegman says of Don Juan - Murray has brought it upon himself by his absurd half and half proceedings — I have to acknowledge the receipt of several books which I will examine shortly - but why do you send anything to the foreign office - that den of thieves? You constitute yourself librarian to these lazy rascals who ought to be copying dispatches instead of poking their noses into books intended for my lordship only - Adieu presto and believe me very your
